We are water and the sensations that flow throughout our lives. We are the cycles of emotions that imbue us with moments that intensely mark each stage of our lives. We are laughter and calm, wisdom and renovation, strength and sensitivity, love and confidence, beauty, time and magic. We are creativity and happiness. We are the Culture of Water.

Our almanac is composed of twelve cycles that run parallel to the months of the year. At full moon in each of our baths we celebrate a party which has at its centre the essence of which we are made, which we have and which we need.

We are also a culture of hospitality and we invite poets and writers to collaborate with our almanac by lending their sensibilities to light up each cycle with their words and creativity.

Enter our almanac as we cross over the threshold of the Hamman ; slowly, in silence, ready to allow ourselves to be led by our sensations, to let our emotions flow.

Country Dressage, together with Spanish music and costumes of old Andalusia. The director of the show, José Carlos González Guerrero, and principal horseman has won many important riding accolades during his career, such as Champion of Spain in 2009 and Gold Medal on many occasions in the Spanish Horse Show Sicab (one of the most challenging equestrian events in the riding world). The show lasts approximately one and a half hours, during which we can enjoy 20 different horses, all trained by their riders, who show off their skills and training and perform the most perfect dressage in different styles and movements over a variety of different performances:

5. THE ANDALUSIAN PETRA.

There is a place steeped in history , where time stands still and man can once again renew his ancestral links with the land.

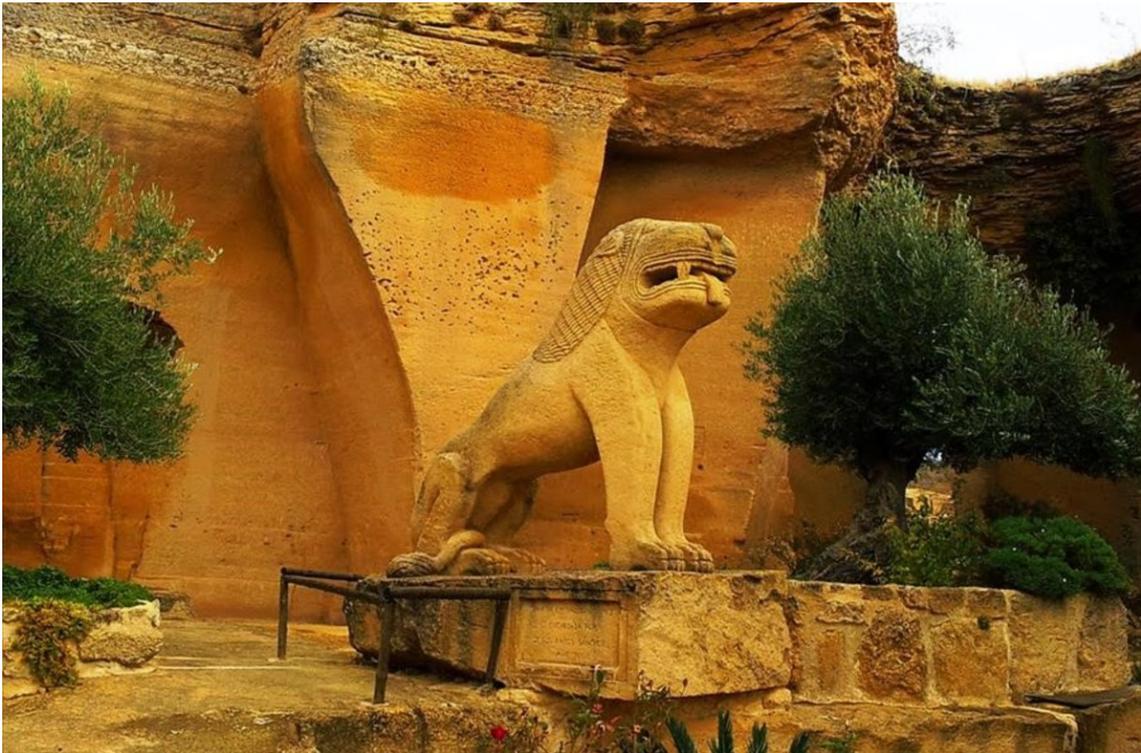

Located on a hill popularly known as The Quarries, the building rises up like a golden crown in an area rich in the history and memories of a people who date back to the era of the Turdetans and subsequently through the lineage of the Romans, Arabs and through to the Duke of Osuna.

In more recent times, “this quarry, El Coto, provided work and food for various families of the stone workers who extracted the white volcanic stone which gives shape to the houses and monuments of the village.

Some of them even lost their lives to their work”.

Hacking their way through the rock with pickaxes, El Coto slowly took form. The toughness of the outer layer of rock was such that the tools used would just break and the workers were forced to continue the excavations from beneath it. This layer today is the roof.

The El Coto quarry has been disused since the late 1960s when the business went into a decline, and this vast construction was used for storage space and even a granary.

El Coto Las Canteras quarry boasts more than 4 000 m² of gardens in which a wide variety of native plants may be found. It is a space full of spectacular corners, ideal for holding concerts, civil weddings, cultural events, open air receptions , así como un espacio de apoyo en producciones: ubicación de unidades móviles de televisión, carpas auxiliares, vestuarios y hoteles móviles. It is also ideally suited for filming, and the setting up of mobile television units, additional marquees, changing rooms and mobile accommodation.

In the grounds we can also see different sculptures and carvings of great magnitude and intricacy, which together with the grandeur of the facade of El Coto, render this a place of matchless beauty.

BANQUET FUNCTION ROOMS:

El Coto Las Canteras offers an incredible and versatile space for each event, with a height of up to 25 metres in places. It has a natural climate which provides a constant temperature of 22 C with perfect acoustics and a capacity for 600 guests, 800 seats for recitals and conventions, and can hold up to 1 400 people for events.

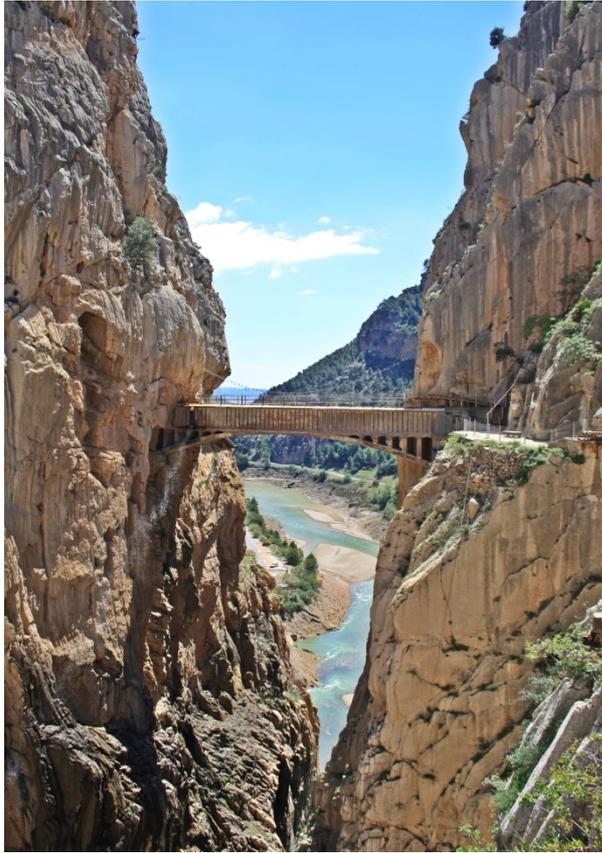

6.CAMINITO DEL REY

Nature Reserve

The Desfiladero de los Gaitanes Gorge is a natural beauty spot, located in the centre of Malaga province, between the towns of Alora, Antequera and Ardales. This is one of the most spectacular scenery of the Malaga Mountains. The river Guadalorce flows between its steep and rather high walls, after having passed through the reservoirs of El Chorro, Guadalorce, Guadalteba and Gaitanejo.

The Gaitanes Gorge is a canyon carved by the river Guadalorce in the municipality of Alora which at some points is only 10 metres wide and 700 metres deep. The northern access to it is via the Guadalorce reservoirs and the southern is via El Chorro reservoir.

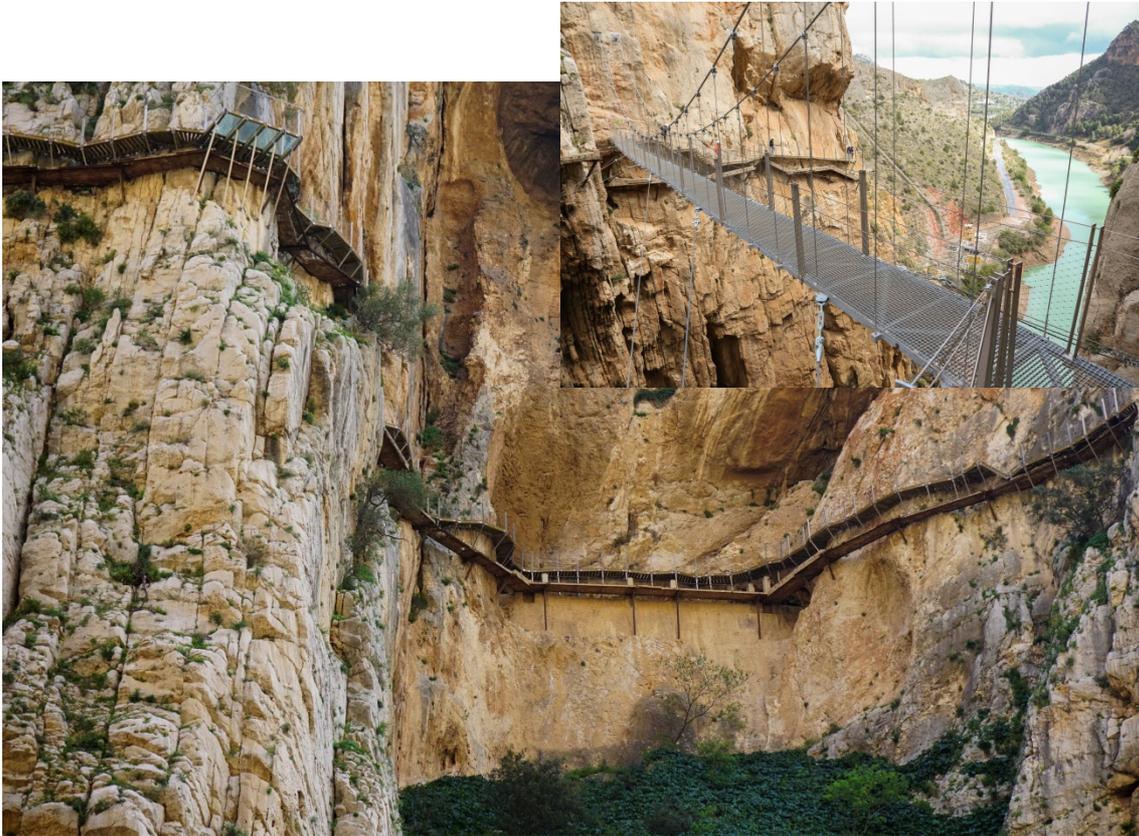

The Caminito Del Rey is a route which allows you to cross through the heart of the two gorges of the Desfiladero de los Gaitanes on hanging walkways perched from the rock face, at a height of 100 metres above the ground, enabling you to discover hidden landscapes and to experience sensations of heights until now only accessible to the most experienced climber.

At the beginning of the twentieth century with the industrialisation of Malaga, there was a plan to make the most of the difference in height between the beginning and end of the gorges of some 90 metres to produce electricity. A walkway precariously perched on the rock was a means of accessing the canal for maintenance work, an essential part of the engineering works. The walkway was known as the Little Balconies of the Gaitanes in view of the small balconies that still exist along the upper section.

In 1953, the walkway changed its name to Caminito del Rey, the King's Little Pathway, in memory of King Alfonso XIII's visit to the El Chorro Reservoir in 1921.

“FREAKS OF NATURE”

7. NEREO BOATYARD

Nereo Boatyards are one of the oldest traditional boatyards of Spain dedicated to the ancient craft of wooden boats. Nereo offers you all our handicraft experience for you to make your dreams come true.

The historic buildings of the Nereo Boatyards house the Ethnographic Ecomuseum of the Maritime Patrimony of Andalusia. We design, build and repair, from the ancestral Jabega Boat or traditional Sardinal Mediterranean sailboat; to historic replicas, such as the Bergantín Galvez town brig so decisive in the independence of the United States, or the replica of the Phenicia which is built every year as part of the museum programme.

The carpentry of the Seashore Shipyards has been inscribed in the Catalogue of the Andalusian Historic Patrimony.

Ecomuseum in the Nereo Boatyards

An integral part of the museum is a series of informative panels dealing with the maritime and ethnographic heritage of this local beach district, as laid out in the protection of the activity by the Directorate General of Cultural Sites of the Junta of Andalucia. In this way the Museum aims to disseminate all the elements of the ethnographic culture of this area, as outlined in the project set up by the Andalusian Federation for Culture and Maritime and River Heritage; this includes the gastronomy of the chiringito beach bars and the sardine “moragas”, a stew in earthenware bowl cooked on the embers, the folklore of the existing Marengo choirs and the so called “ Folksong for the Jabegotes”, and the traditional fishing of the men who still make their living from this activity.

Workshops which can be held at the boatyard:

- Trips in Jabega boats
- Courses in the making of nets, sailors' knots, model shipbuilding, etc.
- Visit + typical Malaga lunch, sardines on skewers cooked on open fire

9. CARRATRACA THERMAL SPA.

MINERAL-MEDICINAL WATERS

UNIQUE LUXURY IN EUROPE

THERMAL SPA BATHS WITH HISTORY

The healing power of the Carratraca waters rich in sulphur, calcium and magnesium of Carratraca has been recognised since the times of the Romans. The great warriors would come to this village in the mountains of Malaga to rest their soul and heal their wounds. However, the name was given to this village on the slopes of Sierra Blanquilla by the Moors as it was where they would clean themselves of impurities and heal their bodies. The name Carratraca comes from the Arabic “Karr-al-karak”, which means “cleansing of plagues”.

Legend has it that it was the smuggler Juan “El Camisón” (the literal translation is “he who wears the long gown”) who rediscovered the healing power of the waters. His nickname describes him well; his body was raw and full of festering sores, so the only thing he could wear was a fine long linen gown. Juan “El Camisón” reaches this small town fleeing from justice and he hides in the farmyard of a shepherd “El cortijo de las aguas hediondas”(The farm of smelly water); day after day he watches how the shepherd bathes the sheep that have dirty wool and blackened skin in foul smelling water. “El Camisón” decides to do the same and he finds that after bathing himself a few times, his skin that was formerly swollen and ulcerous recovers its normal colour and smoothness.

Years later

These same waters where “El Camisón” cured his wounds became the epicentre of the European Bourgeoisie life, a place where millions of deals were sealed whilst taking the waters; it was a place for kings, aristocrats and noblemen to retreat to and relax.

In 1830 King Ferdinand VII visited the thermal spas and ordered the construction of the “Prince’s Hostel”, the present day Hotel Villapadierna Thermas, so that he might have somewhere to stay while he was taking the waters. Twenty-five years later, thanks to the Count of Teba, father of Eugenia de Montijo (wife of Napoleon III) and Maria Francisca XV, Duchess of Alba, donating land in exchange for exclusive use of one of the baths, this exquisite Neoclassical spa was built in sandstone and marble. Today this building still survives after an exhaustive renovation project and is connected to the hotel by an underground passage.
